

Sandy grew up in a very small town in southern Missouri where gardening was a way of life. She learned at the side of her grandmother, who always had a vegetable garden but very little time or interest in flowers. In her mind, if you couldn't cook with it, it wasn't important! Her mother enjoys gardening today – both flowers and vegetables.

After traveling throughout Europe and the southern United States during her husband's time in the military, Sandy and her family settled in the Kansas City area. With a formal education in business, she spent 20 plus years in the corporate world holding a variety of leadership and management positions. Her primary focus during that time was business operations and customer service and our clients certainly benefit from her expertise in both of those areas.

Sandy brings this experience along with her love of gardening to Greenleaf. She excels at interacting with maintenance clients and makes sure their gardens are cared for in a manner which exceeds their expectations.

The best part of her job, in Sandy's own words:

Getting to know our customer is definitely the best part of my job. I take pleasure in helping people enjoy their outdoor space and sharing their gardens with them.
